

Growing up near the picturesque Blue Ridge Mountains in Virginia, Patricia acquired a love for her natural surroundings at an early age. Her passion has always been drawing and painting, and she graduated from The College of William and Mary with a degree in Fine Arts. In her work, she is inspired by the visions of tonalist painters, both contemporary and historical, as she follows an intuitive process to move beyond the exact physical manifestation of reality to portray the essential elements of her subject matter.

Her paintings are a juxtaposition of a world which exists and is visible with one created from imagination, process, and yearning for the intangible.
