

Donald Journey

Donald Journey was born in Rye, New York, in 1945, and was educated at Columbia University, the Pratt Institute, and the Art Students League. He is a member of The Guild of Boston Artists.

Mr. Journey's work is firmly rooted in the great landscape tradition, stretching from Dutch 17th century painting through the Barbizon and Hudson River Schools, to late 19th and early 20th century French and American Impressionism. Nonetheless, one cannot mistake the evidence that his work is also informed and enlivened by the influence of modern painting. It is this union, one of timeless motif and of lively surface, that distinguishes his work from both his predecessors and his contemporaries, making his paintings very much of our time, and instantly recognizable.

In 2016, Donald received the Edmund C. Tarbell Prize from the Guild of Boston Artists and exhibited a large group of recent paintings in Westport, CT at the new branch of his Boston gallery, Quidley & Company. In the same year he established, under the umbrella of the NAA, the Donald Journey Traveling Fellowship. In February of 2019, the Fellowship awarded its third grant of $5000 for travel and painting in Europe. Donald is a Master Artist member of the Newburyport Art Association.
