Susana O'Sullivan was born in Boston and raised in Andover, Massachusetts. After graduating from Newton Country Day School in Newton, Massachusetts in 1965 she attended the University of Denver in Colorado and graduated with a BA from Merrimack College in North Andover, Massachusetts.

Susana became actively interested in oil painting as a young child. She studied art history in high school and college as well as having taken many various fine art courses. She attended drawing and oil painting workshops in Andover, Boston, Cambridge, Rockport and Ipswich Massachusetts. Susana had opportunities to travel to France and Italy to study the art of those countries as well as to Ireland where she took an intensive landscape workshop.

Susana's appreciation of nature's colors inspired her to work plein air on New England landscapes. She often paints in New Hampshire and Maine, yet focuses on local scenes of the North Shore and Cape Ann.
