

BUDDY PRITCHETT

Form, composition, color, texture and tension are all visually stimulating and can be found in nature, man-made objects and the mind. I find new technology (i.e. space exploration, new more powerful microscopes that explore the nano world and computers) open up vast visual possibilities that I find exciting to explore and imagine in the world of art.

Buddy, who has owned his design firm for over 40 years now, designs corporate identity, annual reports, brochures, magazine and news ads, exhibits, 3-D packaging, catalogs, web design, and art direction on national magazines. Some of his clients include Pennzoil, Quaker-State, Exxon, Mobil, Shell, Halliburton, and several bank institutions. Services also include studio, sports, on site and aerial photography. He does fine art paintings, has had one-man shows in Houston art galleries and has been represented by galleries in New Orleans. Prior to opening his own studio, Buddy worked for a firm that did contract work for NASA. Having received a secret clearance, he worked on many technical projects, and also did illustrations of many prototype space capsules, recovery vehicles and satellites. He also helped build full-scale mock-ups of space vehicle instrument panels. Buddy earned his B.A. degree from the University of North Texas.
