

DAVID STONE

I have been in the photographic and imaging business since the early 1970's, after completing the course of study at the New England School of Photography.

I am a photographer on the staff of the Photographic Department at Boston's Museum of Fine Arts. As to my personal photography, I think of myself primarily as a photographer of the natural scene, though I find myself drawn to anything where light, shadow, texture and line are at play. My work can be seen in local galleries and juried shows. I have led photographic workshops in Rockport and Gloucester and an Ipswich workshop for the Trustees of Reservations at the Crane Estate. I am a photography instructor at the Ipswich Museum's Dow Arts Program.
