

Janet Seeger
BIO

I am a graduate of Berklee College of Music, with a degree in composition, but as I came to discover that music more aptly made it's place for me as an avocation, I applied my sensibilities of composition to visual arts, and have made my living as a studio, commercial and press photographer for the last 30 years.

Another more recent career shift has taken place only in the last several years, as my love of working with leather has opened me to the joy of working with my hands.

To date, I continue work as a studio photographer, but also continue to build a portfolio of hand-made leather goods that seems to be drawn, more and more, towards one-of-a-kind custom handbags.
